GRAND TARGHEE TO HOST FIRESIDE SUSTAINABILITY “STORY-TELLING” EVENING

Grand Targhee Resort will host a Sustainability “story-telling” evening for the community at the resort on Tuesday evening, June 26th with Pete Sibley, Jackson, Wyoming’s musical artist, story-teller and community activist for sustainability. “Sustainability” is defined as meeting the needs of the current population without compromising the ability for future generations to thrive. Grand Targhee Resort has embraced this concept in several programs initiated at the resort over the past five years and most recently hired Christina Thomure as its full-time Director of Sustainable Operations.

Thomure invites members of the community to a bonfire, complete with appetizers and s’mores for the kids, starting at 7:00 p.m. on the 26th. “This is a great opportunity for community members to get together in a fun setting and share success stories, swap information and in general, support each other in our efforts to be more sustainable. So many local folks are engaged in very cool projects in order to be more sustainable in their own lives; we can all benefit from hearing those stories,” continued Thomure.

The Sustainability programs will be moved to Teewinot Lodge Lobby in the event of inclement weather. For additional information on this story-telling evening, or any Grand Targhee Sustainability Programs, please call Christina Thomure, Director of Sustainable Operations, at 307-353-2300, ext. 1375 or download the resort’s sustainability brochure at www.grandtarghee.com.
