GRAND TARGHEE TO HOST PRESENTATION ON HOME-BUILDING USING LOCAL, NATURAL MATERIALS

Grand Targhee Resort is inviting the public to an evening presentation and discussion with Wayne J. Bingham and Jerod Pfeffer, authors of Natural Timber Frame Homes: building with wood, stone, clay, and straw. The authors also discuss their theory that in the rush to acquire bigger and better homes and to pay off increasingly larger mortgages, many homeowners have been left feeling personally dissatisfied. In their presentation, they will offer compelling evidence that what most people really desire is not bigger homes, not more space, but better space. Bingham and Pfeffer will discuss the future of houses—those inspired not by a technology-governed and energy-intensive world, but instead developed organically in response to the places in which we live.

“Why is it, asks Christina Thomure, Director of Sustainable Operations at Grand Targhee Resort, that we honor local structures that are still standing after hundreds of years? I think it’s because they are durable and have withstood the test of time, they are unique- filled with character and charm, and remind us of a time when people were more connected to the land they lived on and the structures they lived in.”

The event will be held Wednesday, August 15th at 7PM in the Rendezvous Lodge, 2nd floor. For more information, contact Christina Thomure, Director of Sustainable Operations, at 307-353-2300, X1375 or email at cthomure@grandtarghee.com and to download a brochure on the resort’s Sustainable Operations, visit www.grandtarghee.com.
